Soon & Heard Around MURRAY

Fride is a great weapon, but a fearful thing too. We used sensibly with courage it forms a hard to beat combination.

Four Year old picked up a dish of hot biscuit pudding last night and put it on the table.

The hot dish burned his hands, but with the family looking on he refused to cry. We admit he put on quite a show of holiness with some mighty forced smiles, but he didn't cry.

We touched the dish to see how hot it was, and we couldn't hold our hand to it.

Needless to say he will make a test before he picks up another one.

The summer day yesterday brought on a lot of complaints about wearing long pants, long sleeve shirts, and shoes.

The kids were so convinced that summer was really here that they refused to believe that it was cold again this morning or that it would go down to 32 tonight.

Youth is a wonderful thing. When you are small it seems to be about two years between summers, so you can't blame them.

Looks like everybody's Iris is in bloom.

Even the small wild Iris we have has a bloom on it.

Won't be long before you can see roses blooming everywhere.

Little's store is having some work done just inside the front door.

Floor sanded some, so it is being replaced.

House going up on Woodlawn.

Don't forget to get your dog inoculated against rabies.

We had the deed done yesterday.

Thanks to the mother's of Ledger and Times route boys, who are so interested in their sons work that they are going to see to it that their papers are delivered right while they are on the camping trip today and tomorrow.

A boy hardly ever fails to do a good job when his parents are interested in his work too.

Smallest four year old looks like he had been dragged through a briar patch.

Has a knot on his forehead where he was hit with something, a big scratch on his cheek, the result of a collision with the six year old, a cut on the back of his head where he bumped into something. On top of all that he got sunburned yesterday.

The absence of people like Mrs. J. D. Rowlett is missed by people all over town.

Schools Are Red Target

WASHINGTON April 10 (UPI)—FBI director J. Edgar Hoover is convinced that Communists are trying to infiltrate the faculties of American schools "to poison the minds of our youth." In testimony before a Senate Appropriations subcommittee, made public today, he indirectly endorsed current congressional investigations of alleged Red penetration of the educational system. Both the House Un-American Activities Committee and the Senate Internal Security subcommittee are conducting such inquiries. They have been sharply criticized by educators and others as a threat to academic freedom. While Hoover did not refer to the controversy in so many words, he made clear his sympathies by telling the subcommittee: "I, FBI studies 'definitely established' that the Communists have endeavored to infiltrate into the various educational systems where there is a chance of indoctrinating the receptive minds of American youth."

"No element of academic freedom" is involved in the question of barring Communists from teaching jobs. "A person, in order to be a teacher, ought to have a free intellect. You cannot have a free intellect if you are a Communist." Hoover testified at a secret session on March 27, to support the FBI's request for $77,000,000 in operating funds during the 1954 fiscal year beginning July 1. This would be an increase of $6,700,000 over his current year. The FBI chief said the extra money is needed to hire additional agents and other staff employees to handle an ever-growing job of maintaining internal security. He told the senators that subversive activities have "materially increased," since the outbreak of the Korean war. He said his agents face new problems, "far more difficult," since the Communist Party has gone underground. The party, he said, has now become a shadowy organization with alternate leaders appointed to replace those imprisoned by the government.

Rabies Can Be Prevented By Vaccination

Article Three In The Series On Rabies

Every year from 6,000 to 10,000 dogs in the United States have rabies. The bite of a rabid dog can pass this terrible disease to children and adults. Once symptoms of rabies develop, the disease is fatal. After the bite of a rabid animal, vaccination of the person bitten is resorted to in an effort to prevent the development of the disease. This vaccination is known as the "Pasteur Treatment," and it requires daily injections. Although necessary, they are annoying and painful, and there is always the possibility of serious reactions. The Pasteur treatment does not prevent the development of rabies in all instances. Vaccination of all dogs will prevent endless anxiety, as well as help to eradicate rabies.

Thousand of children and adults throughout the world are bitten each year by rabid dogs or dogs suspected of having rabies. The "Pasteur Treatment" consequently being required. This situation can be remedied by preventing rabies in the dog population through dog vaccination.

There are three reasons for vaccinating your dog:
1. To protect your family and your friends against rabies.
2. To protect your pet—your dog—from rabies. Your dog is a devoted and respected member of your family in health and in sickness, and is entitled to your protection from this disease.
3. To play your part in abating public health protection for your whole community. If all dog owners keep their dogs immunized through vaccination, rabies will no longer be a problem.

In playing your part in your community and in supporting your health department by having your dog immunized, there are several other matters that are related to the prevention and control of rabies in which you, as a dog owner, have a responsibility. Have your dog licensed as required by law.

Have an interest in ridding your community of stray and unwanted dogs. Such dogs, uncontrolled and unvaccinated, are a menace to your children and to your pet.
In the event of a rabies epidemic due to the failure of others to vaccinate their dogs, give your support as a citizen and a dog owner to whatever quarantine and vaccination measures are promulgated by the authorities.

RUSSELLVILLE April 10 (UPI)—Charles Simmons, 10, a polo victim who is paralyzed in both legs used a crutch yesterday to kill a fox which attacked him in the front yard of his home here. The boy killed the animal, believed to be infected with rabies, with one blow. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Winston Simons and recently served as "mayor" of Russellville during a 4-H celebration.

Revivals Planned By Cumberland Presbyterians

The Coordinating Committee of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church in Kentucky Synod, is announcing a simultaneous revival, beginning next Sunday, April 12, in approximately 100 churches throughout the state. These evangelistic services are well planned, and every one in this community is urged to partake of the spiritual blessings. This committee, working with the churches is making it possible for people to hear the Gospel preached by a minister "from one of the neighboring states," a spokesman said. The visiting ministers will make the necessary announcements as to the day services. The pastors and members of the Cumberland Presbyterian churches in this section extend an invitation to all to attend these evangelistic meetings during the week of April 12-19.

HE'S JUST GETTING BACK FROM A BICYCLE RIDE

INVENTOR Charles (Fantastico) Smith tugs his weird nautical device, made of burlap, up on the beach near Los Angeles following an unexpected wetting. He was going to pedal it—there's a no-wheels bicycle mounted inside to provide power—to Catalina island, but it cracked while being rolled down the beach, and water poured in. ### Milwaukee Braves Get Good Schedule

CINCINNATI, O. April 10 (UPI)—The transplanted Milwaukee Braves were given an attractive schedule of 32 night games and 10 Sunday and holiday double headers today in the newly revised 1953 National League schedule.

The Pittsburgh Pirates, who look over the old Boston Braves' schedule and became a member of the "eastern" half of the league, dropped one night game, from 28 to 27, but added one Sunday—double header, Milwaukee took over the old Pittsburgh schedule with some revisions.

Another feature of the new schedule announced today by President Warren C. Giles of the National League was the formal transfer of the major league All-Star game from Braves Field in Boston to Crosley Field in Cincinnati, Tuesday, July 14.

The National League, desirous of getting the new Braves off to a successful financial start this season, assigned them four more night games and three more Sunday double headers than their old predecessors from Boston. Seven of these night games are against the defending champion Brooklyn Dodgers, regarded as the top drawing cards in the league. Pittsburgh had one less night game than in its original '53 schedule, but increased its Sunday—holiday double headers from six to seven and added a twilight night bill against the Cincinnati Reds, August 25.

Rodney Lee Brodie Almost Like Normal Baby Now

CHICAGO April 10 (UPI)—Rodney Lee Brodie, kidnapped five months ago, is now almost like a normal baby today, but the operation that separated him from his Siamese twin has left him slightly paralyzed on the left side.

This was disclosed in a medical report by doctors who performed the historic operation at the University of Illinois Research Hospital last December 17. But the doctors said the slight paralysis should not prove a handicap, although Rodney cannot recognize objects by the sense of touch with his left hand.

The doctors' report, made public in the form of an exhibit at the current meeting of the American Academy of Neurology, also said that Rodney, now 19 months old, still cannot sit up without support. Neither can he hold his head erect by himself, the report said. Doctors said there was a possibility that a small segment of the brain controlling such activity may be slow to develop, or possibly is damaged.

Rodney and his twin, Roger Lee, were born joined at the tops of their skulls. Roger never regained consciousness after the surgical separation, and subsequently died. The medical report was made by Drs. Oscar Segge, Herbert Grossman and Paul Greeley. On the credit side of the ledger, they said Rodney has normal reflexes, is alert, can hold his own bottle and shows definite preferences in such things as food, music and people.

Rescue Squad Called In Drowning

The Murray Rescue Squad was called out yesterday about five o'clock when a truck was reported to have fallen through a bridge at Cadiz.

About ten or twelve members of the squad answered the call and five of the group stayed at the site working last night.

They were still on the job this morning. A truck driven by Dorris Walker, broke through the state highway bridge, across Little River, South of Cadiz, and plunged into fifteen feet of water. Walker was drowned when he was pinned in the cab.

The truck was loaded with railroad cross-ties when it crashed through the 150-foot bridge. Part of the bridge fell in on top of the truck.

The truck is owned by Bill McNichols of Cadiz. Walker had farmed most of his life but was driving for McNichols at the time of the accident.

Letter To Editor

Dear Editor:
Brow Pearson says Barkley will run for Governor because he was defeated for the office in 1923 by W. J. Fields, which is not true. Barkley and Fields were not opponents as Fields received a committee nomination after the death of nominee Camble Cantrell, who died with not enough time to call a primary to make another nomination.

I happened to be on the Executive Committee that made the nomination. Barkley was pleased with the nomination of Fields and coined the phrase, "Honest Bill from Olive Hill", and made a vigorous campaign for him.

Hailed As First Step To End The Korean War

By LEROY HANSEN

PANMUNJOM, Korea, April 10 (UPI)—United Nations negotiators prepared today to sign an agreement providing for an exchange of sick and wounded prisoners of war—the first step that could lead to an armistice in Korea.

The UN liaison team had permission from UN Commander Gen. Mark Clark to sign the 10-point plan which would start 600 ailing Allied prisoners, including 120 Americans, home within 10 days. In turn, the Allies would hand over to the Communists 5,000 disabled prisoners, including 5,100 North Koreans and 700 Chinese.

Clark said in Tokyo Friday night he "anticipated" the agreement would be signed Saturday when liaison officers meet at 11:20 a.m. Approval of the plan by the UN commander came shortly after the Communist high command again submitted a compromise offer to repatriate all prisoners of war and resume full-dress armistice talks. The proposal was submitted in a letter from North Korean Gen. Nam Il to Lt. Gen. William K. Harrison, UN chief negotiator. The letter was handed to the UN at Friday's liaison meeting.

In essence, the Communists suggested that all prisoners unwilling to return to their homelands be handed over to a neutral country. Chinese Premier Chou En-Lai first made the proposal late last month. The United Nations holds 46,000 such Communist prisoners. The other 81,500 have told the UN they want to go back to the Reds.

The letter did not give a finished or final plan for ending the war, nor did it directly ask for a resumption of the talks. But it indirectly suggested they be resumed by saying "concrete measures" can only be "discussed and decided upon" at the conference table.

Clark made no mention of the latest Red proposal in approving the exchange of disabled prisoners. But he and his staff studied it closely Friday night and today to see if it gave any hope for a quick settlement of the war.

It was learned that before receiving the note, Clark was optimistic about the situation and had hopes that progress to date might lead to the working out of a truce. Sources close to Clark said he would move slowly but would be willing to meet the Reds halfway if they are sincere. The speedy negotiations are exchanging disabled prisoners was a test of their sincerity.

Clark's announcement Friday night, said: "General Mark W. Clark, commander-in-chief, United Nations command, announced tonight that the Murray State College Band will present a concert in the Murray State College Auditorium, Monday evening April 13, at 8:15 p.m."

Browns Sell Ball Park

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 10 (UP)—The St. Louis Browns were back home today from their spring exhibition tour—as tenants of Busch Stadium.

The Browns' Sportsman's Park Thursday became the property of Anheuser-Busch, Inc., which also owns the Cardinals, in a quick $800,000 deal calculated to improve the stadium and also help the Browns financially.

The Browns signed a five-year lease to rent from the Cardinals for $175,000 a year.

August A. Busch Jr., president of the brewery and of the Cardinals, said a $400,000 improvement program on the park is already underway and it will hereafter be known as Budweiser Stadium.

He said the purchase was prompted by the Browns' financial inability to make necessary improvements or to maintain the park.

Murtaugh Is Working On Plan To Retire

By BILL FERGUSON

ATLANTA, April 10 (UP)—Pepper Danny Murtaugh, the former Pittsburgh Pirate great, still wants to play baseball, but nevertheless he's working out a formula that will take him off the diamond for good.

Danny is out to make the grade as a manager, and it appears that his dugout duties may bring a halt to his occasional appearances on the playing field.

Danny started on his new career last year with the New Orleans Pelicans in the Class AA Southern Association. He took a bunch of exceptionally good ball-players and kept them in the first division all the way.

But on the last day of the season, New Orleans fell into a fourth-place tie with stretch driving Memphis and lost to the Chicks, managed by former major-league Luke Appling, in a sudden-death playoff.

The finish was a big disappointment to Danny, but the 45-year-old veteran says that the Pels are going to be among the first four this year if not on top.

Last year Danny played a bit at second base and came in for an occasional pinch-hitting role, but this year he may not see much action.

The fancy-fiddling second baseman virtually closed his path to the keyhole back by installing Lou Klein there. Klein, a former major-league pitcher, probably will hold down that position all season.

Although Danny was considered a much better fielder than a hitter in the majors, he has always been tough in the clutch. In 1948 with the Pirates he belted in 71 runs.

Danny was also dangerous as a pinch-hitter for New Orleans last season, and it could be that he will step in the tough spots again this year. He has listed himself on the playing roster, but with Klein in the line-up it looks as if Danny is about to end his career as a second sacker.

Danny probably has his eye on getting back to Pittsburgh as the top man, but right now he's concentrating on the Pirate farm club.

And the Pels will have a "good ball club" according to Danny.

TODAY'S SPORTS PARADE

By OSCAR FRALAY

NEW YORK (UP)—Whirlaway is gone but it will be a long, long time before "Mr. Longtail" is forgotten.

For Whirlaway was a horse of the people, such as one as Man O'War, Exterminator and Count Fleet. Such a one as Native Dancer currently promises to become.

He had glamor.

That's an indefinable something which works in horses, just as it does in men. Who can say, for instance, why athletes like Stan Musial are deprived of their rightful glory because of a retiring and quiet nature which for lack of better words is set down as "colorless"?

And while Musial writes, flawless performances into the record book, he never attains the stature of a Ruth, or a DiMaggio. They had that certain "it." So, too, did Whirlaway.

He didn't have the greatest record of all time. And his money winning record as the first horse to win more than $500,000 long since has been surpassed. But when they talk about the great horses, you'll always hear his name mentioned.

He was a picture horse with a long, sweeping tail that helped him win the Kentucky Derby in 1941. So, too, did Eddie Arcaro, who was to ride him.

There wasn't much reason for "Mr. Longtail" to be the favorite when they paraded at Churchill Downs that May day in 1941. But he was.

As the field thundered away, Whirlaway was blocked off and had to be eased up. At the net!

mile mark he was eighth, 10 lengths back of the leading dispopose, with Porter's Cap, Blue Pair, Our Boots, Robert Morris, Market Wise and Shalator between Mr. Longtail and the front end.

At three-quarters, Whirlaway was up to sixth, but still 10 lengths off the pace as he collared Robert Morris and Market Wise. And at the mile he had tumbled up to fourth rolling by his old enemy, Our Boots, and the straining Shalator. He was only four lengths back now, and as they hammered into the stretch, the crowd roared: "Here comes Whirlaway!"

He was indeed, coming between horses and rocketing on top by three full lengths as the field straightened out for home. And at the end he was a cool eight lengths on top—with a Derby record of 2:01 2/5 which still stands today.

Sitting Bull Moved Over

FOR YATES, N. D. (UP)—A group of South Dakotans disinterred the body of famed Indian Chief Sitting Bull Wednesday and carried it off to South Dakota.

Charles Spencer, Standing Rock Indian Reservation superintendent, said the group took the body under authority of a telegram he received from the Interior Department. The telegram said it heirs of the great warrior wanted his body moved it was their right to have it done, Spencer said.

Spencer said the South Dakotans dedicated the remains would be taken to a proposed memorial site on the Grand River near Mobridge, S.D.

A delegation of South Dakotans had attempted earlier to persuade North Dakota officials to sign papers authorizing removal of the body to South Dakota. Grey eagle, an Indian claiming to have power of attorney for several heirs of the famed chieftain, led the delegation and headed the group which took the body.

BLONDES DIE YOUNG

By BILL PETERS

CHAPTER THIRTEEN
I PICKED UP my hat and coat
from the chair and followed the big boy out onto the sidewalk.
The doorman waved an arm when he spotted us, and a car, a big Cadillac that had been parked down the block, moved up and stopped at the entrance of the canopy. The doorman removed his hat and opened the rear door of the car.

"Thanks, Jerry," the big boy
said.
"Your welcome, Mr. Moore."
There was no talk on the way to Mort Ellerton's place. I tried a gamble or two to be sociable, but Eddie was staring out the window and the big boy was smiling at his thoughts. I lit a cigar and smoked, too.

Ellerton lived in a vast expensive tribute to Free Enterprise.
The building, which covered a square block, faced the lake with an air of sturdy entrenched wealth.
This is where we send our hoodlums today, I thought gloomily.
Once it was to Alcatraz, Holmesburg, Sing Sing. Gangsters used to hang out in pool rooms, wear white fedoras and run from the cops. Now it was different; they lived on Lake Shore Drive, belonged to the best clubs and, in their spare time could be found judging stock at horse shows, or passing out medals at high school sports events. A hell of a note.
The trouble was that politicians shook them down because they were vulnerable, but that worked to the hoodlums' interest; nobody is bigger than his banker, the hoodlums soon realized. When this soaked into their skulls they started using the politicians as errand boys.

We entered a vast, echoing lobby,
and were whisked up to the eighteenth floor by a nice-looking youngster in a green uniform. Ellerton had a butler, of course, a hard-faced man who looked as natural in striped trousers as I would in a ballet skirt. He left us in a white-pandled foyer, and came back in a few minutes to tell us we could see Mr. Ellerton.
I followed the big boy into a large room which had in it, among other things, a grand piano, a brooding monster of a television set and a ten-foot bar that was dwarfed by the proportions of the room and also two persons, one of whom I took to be Mort Ellerton. The one I decided wasn't Ellerton was a dead-pan blonde of about twenty who was lying on a sofa beneath a picture window, which filled one end of the room.

She was reading a magazine, lying on her back with her long bare feet extending one foot swinging in slow synchopation with her gum-chewing jaws. We didn't rate a glance from her; she read on, frowning slightly, her swinging silver sandals reflecting a flash of light from the reading lamp.

Mort Ellerton was on his feet facing us, a big man with a round, fleshy face, and sullen irritable eyes. He wore a brown sports coat, beige shirt open at the throat and cream-colored gabardine slacks.
"Well, what is it, Nickey?" he said to the big boy, the one the lacker called Mr. Moore.

"This character wants to talk to you," the big boy said, grinning.

"So what's funny about that?"
Ellerton said, in a hoarse, angry voice. He looked mad. Also he looked as if that were his normal state of mind.

The smile slid off Nickey's broad face. "He was talking about Janey Nelson, boss," he said. "He said he had some ideas about it, and wanted to talk to you. I thought you'd want to see him."

"All right, what's your pipe dream?" Ellerton snapped at the boy.

"I said I was going to find out who killed her," I said.

"What's your interest in the deal?"

"She was a friend of mine."

"Well, she was a friend of mine,
too. We'll get the one who strangled her, my boys or the cops. Don't you worry yourself about it."
"I'm not particularly worried,"
I said.

"Why'd you come to see me?"
"I heard you were a friend of hers."

"Yeah? Who told you that?"
"A reporter named Terry Mitchell."

"He's got his nerve," Ellerton said, laughing shortly.

"It's a she," I said.

Ellerton waved a pudgy well-kept hand impatiently. "All right, let's get to the point. You got some ideas about who killed her?"

"Nothing very specific. I know however that her brother is a junior. I thought that might be worth looking into."

There was a strange little silence in the room then as Ellerton looked me over carefully. "I think you'd better listen to me," he said. "We'll take care of Janey's murder. Got
